Dr Kevin Hung

FRACS MBBS

General Surgeon

Languages: Mandarin (Chinese), Hokkien & English

No Gap Doctor

Dr Hung qualified as a General Surgeon in 2014 and has since spent the majority of his career providing care in regional settings. He appreciates the variety and complexity of cases that general surgery offers and has developed a breadth of skill not commonly seen amongst surgeons.

Special Interests:

- Minimally invasive procedures including advanced endoscopic, laparoscopic and laparo-robotic procedures
- Skin cancer surgery

Dr Hung relocated from rural Taiwan to Melbourne, where he pursued his medical education at the University of Melbourne, earning his Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery in 2003. After completing surgical training at Austin Health and across Victoria, Tasmania, and Alice Springs, he achieved Fellowship with the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons in 2014. He now serves as a Staff Specialist General Surgeon at Bundaberg Private Day Hospital, where he finds great fulfilment working in a regional healthcare setting.

Dr Hung is known for his compassionate and honest approach to patient care, focusing on clear communication and thorough treatment. Nicknamed the 'polyp farmer' in Bundaberg for his meticulous removal of polyps during endoscopic procedures, he is recognised for his careful and diligent clinical work.

A strong advocate for Rapid and Direct Endoscopy, Dr Hung promotes early diagnosis by streamlining procedures for eligible patients, especially those with positive bowel cancer screening results. As a no-gap provider, he ensures patients with private health insurance avoid out-of-pocket expenses, aside from possible anaesthetist fees. He also actively contributes to Bundaberg's medical community, supervising trainees and teaching medical students.
